

A team of graduate students from The University of Tokyo

The team cordially appreciates your support for our virtual International Field Workshop August 2020 in Asia.

Natasha Talisca ADRIANTO is a first year master of public policy student from Indonesia. She has a bachelor's degree in environment and development from Ritsumeikan Asia Pacific University. Her main interest lies in private sector engagement for sustainability and climate change, which is stemmed from her experience in development agency and sustainability consulting.

CHANG Chih Hsiang, majored in mechanical and neural engineering, possess an integrated view in the field of engineering. During the discussion, Chang is willing to discuss about how technology can help and bring benefit in the time of post Covid-19.

Juan Miguel Peraza HERNANDEZ is a master's student from GraSPP interested in topics such as the future of work, digital journalism, and the management of information in the digital era. He majored in law and is looking forward to broaden his knowledge.

Jee Jeremy De SHENG is a first year master of public policy student at the University of Tokyo. He previously did computer science at the National University of Singapore and is currently planning to work in the civil service in Singapore.

Ayumi TIAKO JUIMO is a candidate for the master's degree in public administration. She has 8-years-professional experiences as a permanent staff member in Japan International Cooperation Agency (JICA). Specialized in governance, coordination and partnership with a variety of stakeholders, she had resided in Madagascar and been to Asian and French-speaking African countries.

WANG Meiyun is a master of public policy student at GraSPP from China. Her major is in economic policy and has been a lover of language before studying economics. After coming to Japan, her interest has shifted to economics with the hope to be a researcher in this area.

Veronica WEE is a first year master of public policy at GraSPP with a bachelor of laws from King's College London. Her interest is in migration policy, particularly regarding the protection of people displaced by climate change, and capacity building for adaptation to climate change.

Caojing ZHU is a master of public policy student from China. She is very much interested in the impact of IT on developing countries as well as in the policy decision-making.

Toshiro NISHIZAWA, Professor
Graduate School of Public Policy
tnishizawa@pp.u-tokyo.ac.jp